SIR.—In my last letter I invited evidence for the original form and significance of Erie Hill. I asked for information, not opinions. Others besides Mr Eckford have made the "Erie" suggestion, but the available evidence knocks the bottom out of it on the 1775 and 1820 maps. The "Earlickle," and "The Dolla" tell me that it is pronounced "Earlickle," which is just what I would expect. It may well be that the original name was Hill, but opinions are not evidence. At this stage, we want only facts. "Manor," I don't think is a word. It is a thing fresh to be sure, but not a name. To "The Dolla" I have already referred. It not only has a name, but a history. Geographical names are not names until they are known to a people. I

CAMPBELTOWN'S WELCOME TO CHOIR

At Campbeltown on Saturday night an ardent welcome was accorded Campbeltown Gaelic Choir and their conductor, Mr Malcolm G. McCallum, a local Magistrate. A crowd of several thousands mobbed the choir as they arrived home in two special buses from Oban, bringing with them, for the eighth time since Mr McCallum took over the choir, the Lovat and Tullibardine Shield, the major award for choral singing at the Mod. They had also the Mull and Iona Shield, the premier trophy for male voices.

A pipe band met the buses just after 8 p.m. on the outskirts of the town, and played them through the cheering crowds in Longrow and into Main Street, where the crowd was thickest outside the Town Hall.

At the steps of the Town Hall Mr McCallum and his choir were congratulated by the Provost, Mr R. Wallace Greenlees. Mr McCallum, in thanking the Provost and the citizens for their reception, said that the success of the choir was due to team-work. Requests were then shouted for the choir to give a number of Gaelic pieces, and from an improvised dais in Main Street, Mr McCallum conducted the choir in several items.

ART OF WORKING WITH OTHER PEOPLE Value of Aberdeen Course

The problem of highly skilled people who were handicapped because they had not learned the art of working along with other people, was discussed by Mr J. F. Hall, chairman of the Governors of Robert Gordon's Colleges, Aberdeen, on Saturday, when he presented certificates to students who had completed a three year course in education for management at Robert Gordon's Technical College.

In addition to his technical skill a man had to have the faculty of getting on with others, said Mr Hall. He had to learn how to weigh up the personality of the persons he was meeting, and discover the best method of approach. The training of young men for management in industry at Gordon's College was a scheme which would be of great ultimate benefit to industry and commerce in the North-East of Scotland.

"BIG TOP" MOD PROPOSAL

An Comunn Annual Meeting FUTURE OF GAELIC

From Our Own Reporter

OBAN, Saturday

A HINT that a big top capable of accommodating between three to four thousand people and fitted with rediffusion equipment might be the solution to the National Mod's housing problem, was made by Mr John M. Bannerman, President of An Comunn Gaidhealach, speaking at its annual meeting here to-day.

"Perhaps that is somewhere in the offing," he commented, "to meet the need we have to keep the heart of the movement in the heart of the Highlands."

Mr Bannerman intimated that he intended to retire from the office of president next year. He thought it was good to have changes and to get new ideas. When he suggested there were several who could fill the position with distinction there were cries of "No."

It was announced that the National Mod for 1955 would be held at Aberdeen.

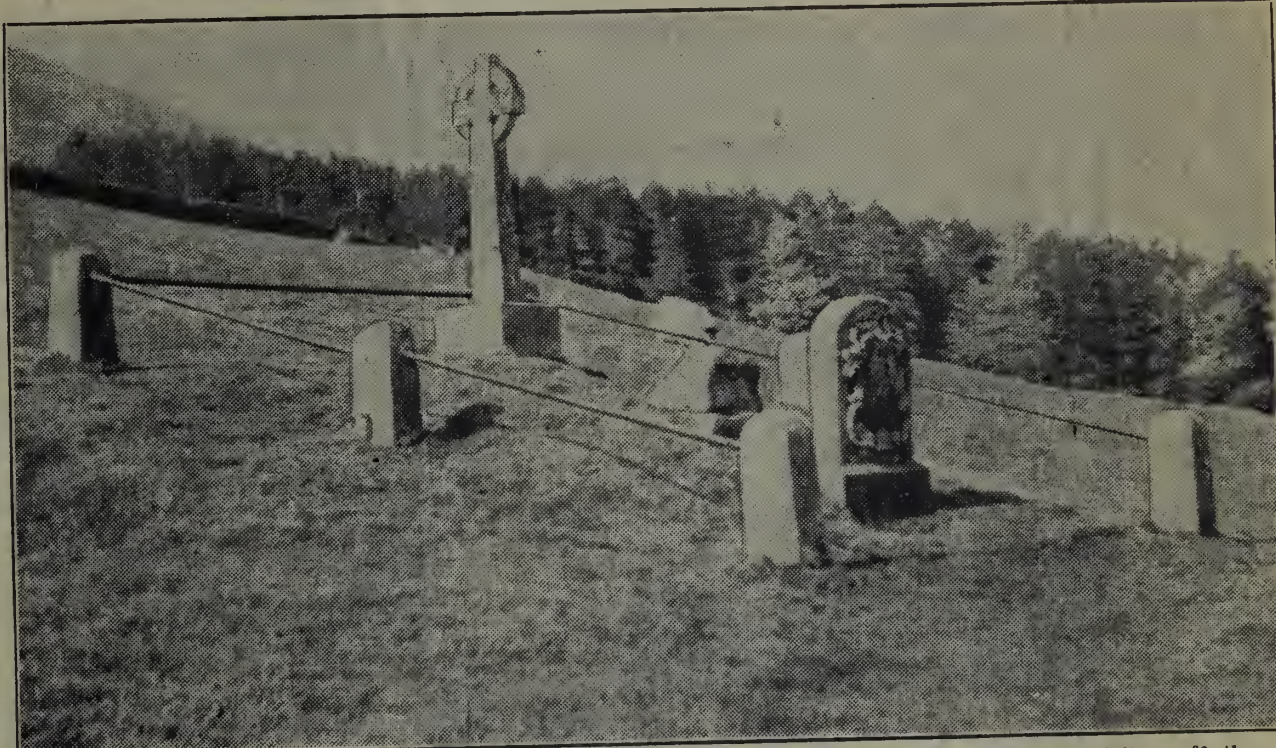

MOVEMENT ON RIGHT LINES?

Executive of An Comunn was Mr Neil Cameron, Sunderland, man, to consider seriously the movement was on the right line. It had been "a wonderful thing," he said, "but in all this culture language was being forgotten."

"We have never had so many Gaelic of a kind," he continued, "but and fewer people speak the language. Children should be brought up to think in it."

"Let us do something to get the language to the people," he concluded, "chasing the shadows."

Charles Wesley

Another of London's blue and white memorial plaques is shortly to be unveiled in Westmoreland Street, St Marylebone, outside the King's Head public-house. Its inscription recalls that Charles Wesley, 1707-1788, divine and hymn writer, lived and died in a house on the site, and that his musician sons, Charles and Samuel, also lived there.

The plaque is actually being fixed above the door of the saloon bar in Wheatley Street, as nearest the site of Wesley's home, known as No. 1 Great Chesterfield Street. Charles Wesley was a younger brother of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, whom he accompanied to Georgia as minister to the colonists, secretary to the Governor, and missionary to the Indians. He was soon back in England, and later claiming

G.A.T.T. AND EMPIRE TRADE POLICY STATEMENT WANTED

25 Whitehall, London,
October 16, 1953

SIR,—It is not easy to assess, as a result of the Conservative conference, how the country now stands in relation to G.A.T.T. and Empire trade.

It seems abundantly clear that the conference itself has had enough of G.A.T.T. The reception given to Lord Balfour of Inchrye and his amendment could leave little doubt on that score, followed as it was by the ovation accorded to Mr L. S. Amery, which was not wholly an expression of admiration and affection, but certainly indicated enthusiastic approbation of what he had said.

What effect the acceptance of this amendment will have upon Government policy cannot be judged by the speech of Mr Thorneycroft, which largely consisted of an appeal to be left alone to achieve the minor alteration in G.A.T.T., which he had submitted to the conference in Geneva. His statement that the Government's present policy was that of the whole Commonwealth and Empire is too simple to be allowed to pass unexamined. There has been no indication that the United Kingdom Government has ever expressed to the rest of the Commonwealth its determination to recover the lost right to increase or create preferences. United Kingdom policy has given every indication of following the line of least resistance, not of giving robust leadership. It is far easier to attain apparent agreement on those lines.

The proposals put forward at Geneva were accompanied by a positive statement that the United Kingdom had no intention of attempting to divert trade to the benefit of Commonwealth countries. Lord Balfour's amendment was a direct condemnation of this policy, but was apparently accepted by Mr Thorneycroft on behalf of the Government. One or other of these Brain-work comes as easily to the old as physical exertion to the child. One is moving, it is true, towards the end of life, but that end is now a goal, and not a reef on which the vessel may be dashed. . . ."—I am &c.

"A Declining County Town"

Fochabers, October 16, 1953

SIR,—Like Mr Simpson, in his letter appearing in your issue of the 16th October, I have no wish to prolong this correspondence. It is necessary to point out, however, that the question was raised whether the "Turra Coo" tradition is on the decline locally or whether in this railway closure duel someone is hanging on to her tail and impeding her. Mr Simpson is reassuring on the first point. On the second, I am chivalrously silent.

The episode of the original "Coo" is by no means only a irrelevance. It is a symbol of a of local invitation and local (even if on that occasion they were ably mobilised in a bad cause) the sadly lacking in ordinary com matters to-day in the north.

I admit to having faith in people when promptly handled and followed on publicly organised lines. For example, not so far away from me when I was a privileged student, converted many shall be glad to see the the

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are in agreement with the experimental facts.

The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the application of the theory of the structure of the atom to the study of the properties of matter. It is shown that the theory of the structure of the atom can be used to explain the properties of matter, and that the properties of matter can be used to test the theory of the structure of the atom.

The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the application of the theory of the structure of the atom to the study of the properties of light. It is shown that the theory of the structure of the atom can be used to explain the properties of light, and that the properties of light can be used to test the theory of the structure of the atom.

The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the application of the theory of the structure of the atom to the study of the properties of the nucleus. It is shown that the theory of the structure of the atom can be used to explain the properties of the nucleus, and that the properties of the nucleus can be used to test the theory of the structure of the atom.

The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the application of the theory of the structure of the atom to the study of the properties of the universe. It is shown that the theory of the structure of the atom can be used to explain the properties of the universe, and that the properties of the universe can be used to test the theory of the structure of the atom.

30 January, 1966.

Mr. George Burnett,
2325 Prospect Avenue,
Evanston, Ill. 60201.

Dear Mr. Burnett:

In looking over an old copy of The Scots Magazine, ^{June} ~~May~~, 1964, I came on your letter relative to the discovery of your business card in a crevice of the memorial to the Burnetts of Burnetland and Burns. This awakened my interest, and has led me to write this letter.

Firstly, my wife is descended from the Stewarts of Traquair, who intermarried with the Burnetts of Burns several centuries ago, as is recorded in a History of Peeblesshire.

Secondly, the first settlement of Kingston, Ontario, in 1784, was due, in a large way, by several Scottish families, including, Purdie, Burnett, Galloway, Howe, Graham, Ferris, Day, etc. These families came from New York City in the fall of 1783, but very evidently originated in the Scottish settlement along the lower Hudson River, in the Newburgh area.

Suspecting that you have an interest in your ancestors, I wonder if you know whether or not there is a history of these Scots or of the Burnett family. Incidentally, these Burnetts were listed in a Provision List of 4 Dec., 1783, as Thomas Burnett, aged 49 years and 11 months.

John Burnett, aged 23 years and 3 months.

Matthew Burnett, aged 21 years and 1 month.

These men were classed as United Empire Loyalists--in American terminology as Tories.

I do not wish to presume on your good nature, but if this letter is of interest to you, I shall be interested in your reply. I shall not be disappointed if you do not answer.

Yours sincerely,

P.S./

These Burnetts can be classed as my fourth cousins.

There will also be a special sermon on "Our Duties and Obligations to Civil Authority."

At the same time in other city and town parishes in the archdiocese and in rural parishes where it is feasible, a high mass in honor of the Holy Ghost will be sung.

Preliminary plans call for the reciting of the Litany of the Saints and singing of "Veni Creator Spiritus" on Sunday following the coronation.

The separate schools of the archdiocese will present patriotic programs on the eve of the coronation or on the day itself.

In Quaker records of Rahway, N.J. Stephen, Jr., wife Anna, and six children transferred to Red Bank, Pa., where their son Daniel marr. Ann Gause. In 1813 the Burnets and Gause families moved to the Quaker settlement near Waynesville, Ohio, where many of them still live. Would like more about these men's wives. Think possible Stephen Jr. was the first Quaker as in "Refugees of 1776 from L. J. to Conn. by Mather." Stephen Burnet signed the association. He lived East Hampton then, but belonged to Rahway and Plainfield as early as 1775.

5. Ichabod 1684-1774, marr. Hannah, 17 Feb 1750, their son Dr. William 1731-1791, Elizabeth, N.J., was prominent doctor in Rev., and has descendants. Will appreciate any help. R.D.A.

GEORGE A. BURNETT

Odessa. — Funeral services for George Albert Burnett, 59, were held from the Jones Funeral Home, Odessa. Mrs. Burnett died in Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, after a lengthy illness. He was born in Odessa a son of the late Herbert Burnett and Melissa Lockwood, and owned and operated a garage in the village.

Surviving are his wife, formerly Constance Murrell, three daughters, Mrs. Harry Barham (Doris), of Roblin; Betty, of Kingston, and Mrs. Fred Pixley (Verna May), of Napanee; and one son, Reginald, of Odessa; also seven grandchildren; and one sister, Mrs. Roy Johnson (Nellie), of Godfrey.

Rev. A. Bache, of the Free Methodist Church, conducted the services, and interment was in Wilton Cemetery.

Pall - bearers were Roy Emmons, Charles Cairns, Omar Brown, Cromwell Campsall, Lloyd Hutchison, and Fred McPherson. Flower-bearers were Frank Hartsell, Hosea Campsall, William Thurlow, and Ford Sharpe. Sept 18 1957

MRS. J. H. OLDHAM

Mrs. J. H. Oldham, one of Yarker's oldest residents, passed away in Kingston. Mrs. Oldham was the widow of Dr. Oldham and had resided in Yarker all her life. She was ill for many years.

Funeral services were held from Berry's Funeral Home in Sydenham to Yarker United Church with the pastor, J. Weese officiating.

Interment was in Yarker Cemetery.

Dear Doctor Burleigh

On the advice of a mutual friend I am laying a problem at your feet

For eight years I have spent the winter months in a small Florida town which is still very Southern.
Most of the old families emigrated there after being bust^{ed} out by Sherman's march through Georgia. There is also a sprinkling of families from Miss: and the Carolinas

I have been struck by the similarities, concerning attitudes toward life, between these people and our old Canadian families of Loyalist stock and I have wondered whether the considerable emigration of Loyalists in Canada from the deep South did not make an impact on Canadian culture which, to the student who looks below
the surface, is visible to this day

Are there, to your knowledge, any Loyalist records that list the refugees by State of origin? Or, are there graveyard records, which as headstones as a rule give place of birth, would at least give me a sampling

I know of the movement of some 900 persons from St. Augustine Fla to N.S. but there were about 13000 Loyalists in Fla in 1783 Did any large number of these come to Upper Canada? They, as well as Loyalistsremaining in the deep South, could have been evacuated from Southern ports, to Montreal and then reached Upper Canada via the waterways to Kingston

It is interesting that the first settler in the old Newcastle district, his burial just outside the Park, which is only a couple of miles from Brighton and he came from the Carolinas

I hope this letter isn't going to put you to a great deal of trouble

Sincerely yours

Norman L. Burnette

Bath, Ont., 27 Aug., 1958

Mr. Norman L. Burnette,
Brighton, Ont.

Dear Mr. Burnette:

Our mutual friend must have great respect for my knowledge of the Loyalists. Tell him that I owe him a letter.

The Loyalists, particularly of Canada, have interested me for a number of years, and I believe that I can safely give you an opinion regarding their distribution in the Exodus. While the histories are loud in their story of the exodus to the Maritimes and Canada, they do not take into account the thousands who returned to the Old Country, nor the many who fled to the British West Indies--Bermuda, Bahamas, Jamaica, etc.

It would but natural that both the Loyalists and the British authorities would seek refuge at the nearest British territory. In the case of the Southern Loyalists this would mean the British West Indies. So, it is logical that many went that way.

To my knowledge of our Canadian (Quebec and Ontario) Loyalists came mainly from the State of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, with more than a few from the New England States. There were also a good many who came from the Maritimes at a later period, having found those provinces too forbidding and barren for their liking. I do not recall any who came from the Southern States, except for an odd one who had been in the Loyalist forces and in New York when the conflict ended. Your man in Brighton from the Carolinas was the exception rather than the rule. Incidentally, only eight small shiploads came to Canada from New York. In practically all instances they were New Yorkers or Jerseyites.

It is very probable that certain 'fringe' communities, particularly those where a living was hard to come by, such as Canada where it was less temperate, and the South where the climate was too warm, would retain certain characteristics and customs longer than in more progressive areas. This might account for the fact that you found two communities widely separated, both having marked similarities, even of unusual words and customs. This would be the reason for your conclusions, rather than the one carried it to the other. The Loyalists were 99% from New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The Loyalists Claims have been printed, except for two bundles, or volumes. I have a copy and you might easily find another in various important libraries. These claims give the place of residence before and after the Revolution. I have just scanned my copy and find little reference to Southern Loyalists. Their claims are likely still in the Public Record Office, London. They would be of little interest to Canadians, seeing that the claimants did not settle here.

As I have said before, I can recall no instance of a Loyalist of Upper Canada having come from any part of U. S. south of Pennsylvania.

I hope that I have furnished you with the information you desire.
